The Bose 901 has created more of a stir in audio circles than any other loudspeaker we can think of, with the possible exception of the original Acoustic Research system. Much of the 901's popularity is attributable to Julian Hirsch's rave report in Stereo Review, and there is no doubt but that Amar Bose's compellingly convincing ads had

Now, let's consider for a moment some of the basic premises on which Dr. Bose based the design of the 901. The major departure from conventional design here is the system's unique directional characteristics, with most of the sound coming from eight rear-facing speakers and the rest from a single front-facing speaker.

As to placement, well do what sounds best. With the success of the 901's Bose turned around and made the very same speaker in black, no front driver and called it Professional. They sold with adjustable stands and were meant to have the drivers facing the audience. Begs the question does placement matter to get the Bose Sound?

Much like a pair of Klipschorns, the Bose 901 lends itself to corner placement. Because the majority of the drivers face rearward, placement is the key to fine-tuning the imaging performance. Putting the speakers closer to room corners
