When Your Brand New Car Gets a Rebuilt Engine

For example: Let's say a car received a brand-new engine at 40,000 miles. In that case, the engine will have only traveled 25,000 miles when the odometer reaches 65,000 miles -- and that means the car may last a little longer than a car with its original engine, since the newer engine hasn't seen as much use.
