The Changing Family ...

As previously noted, divorce is a crisis in the family life cycle, creating a state of disequilibrium for everyone at all generational levels throughout the nuclear- and extended-family system. The disruption is associated with shifts and changes in membership and boundaries, requiring a major reorganization of the family system.

The changing family life cycle by Betty Carter, 1988, Gardner Press edition, in French / français

Bristow & Associates

The individual life cycle takes place within the family life cycle (Carter & McGoldrick, 1988, p. 4).
The foundation of the theory assumes that all families go through predictable change precipitated by life events and sometimes-unpredictable events (Azar, 2017b, 6).

the individual life cycle takes shape as it moves and evolves within the matrix of the family life cycle. Our problems are framed by the formative course of our family's past, the present tasks it is trying to master, and the future to which it aspires. Thus, the family life cycle is the natural context within which
