Coronets And Steel Dobrenica 1

Coronets and Steel is Sherwood Smith's swashbuckling homage to The Prisoner of Zenda with a female lead character. Kim is a California girl with a talent for fencing, a fearless attitude, and a startling resemblance to a missing young woman from a (fictional) Eastern European country called Dobrenica.

CORONETS AND STEEL combines some of my favorite story elements. It's romantic without being sappy, features a ferociously competent and intelligent heroine, and guides me from the familiar (Southern California, where I lived for many years -- even recognize some of the places!) to actual-Europe to the borders of a special and magical kingdom.

Praise. Praise for the Dobrenica series: "It's a delightful romp, with just enough loose ends to leave some hope that the doomed romance might not be so doomed at all."—Locus "Humor and rapier-sharp wit...a lively heroine, mysterious ghosts, and a complex and intricate plot." —Publishers Weekly "Highly recommended for all fantasy and general-fiction collections, as the ...

Coronets and Steel may start slow to anyone less interested in the mysterious and more in actions, but it picks up fast. The plot isn't totally linear, which I like. In high fantasy, linear plots are pretty necessary I feel-- the objective shapes the actions--but this isn't the case here, as I feel most modern books shouldn't.
