Commenting on this colour selection, George stated: 'Red has more strength than black. Black and white is powerful but red on top of it is even more so. It's louder' (George, quoted in Gilbert and George: Dirty Words Pictures, exh. cat., Serpentine Gallery, London, 2002, p. 15). A year later, in 1979, the artists paused to prepare for ...

six works known as The Dirty Words Pictures, which Gilbert and George created in 1977. They follow the format established in the preceding Red Morning series, to which Red Morning Trouble (Tate T07155) belongs. This consists of abutting photographic images mounted in narrow, black metal frames, arranged in a grid.
