At least three people died and six were injured on Wednesday when a building in central Madrid belonging to the Catholic Church was blown apart by an explosion, local authorities said. Initial investigations suggested that the blast in Calle Toledo, a street leading out from the city centre, was caused by a gas leak, Mayor Jose Luis

You got a point though, and Jersey does, in fact, have a small fleet of reclamation barges, basically raft's made of Abyssal steel that have massive hand-cranes, for ships to reclaim wrecks in shallow water for scrapping. Good luck getting them to go out there with possible hungry PT boats running around though.
