"The Grifters" is another of Jim Thompson's electriccharged dances with the devil. It is so hard and so brutally bleak that it undercuts what passes for reality and gives us the real truth that is right out there in front of us with people like Moria and Roy and Lilly whom we would rather not see and therefore do not as we pass them by on the street.

As a crime writer, Jim Thompson wasn't a stylist like Raymond Chandler, for example. But what Thompson had, in spades, was an exceedingly dark vision of humanity. In Thompson's world, there aren't any noble heroes. Everyone acts out of impure self-interest & everyone is a rat bastard at heart.
